"Sustainable By Design: Create Value for your Business and Customers" Bill Shea, VP of Sales, Australis Aquaculture

Sustainability is a buzzword that we hear quite often today, but what does it really mean in today's food marketplace and for your business future? In this session, Bill Shea from Australis Aquaculture, a Massachusetts-based startup that became the world's largest barramundi fish farm, will speak to the challenges, opportunities, and value of designing and operating a sustainable food business from the ground up. Learn about where sustainability credentials matter (and where they don't), and key questions to ask your organization today to help them prepare for the future.

Plant Proteins: Moving to the Center of the Plate Rody Hawkins, PhD, President and CEO, Improved Nature LLC

The global plant based meat market is about $4.6 billion with an annual growth rate of 6.8%. This demand has created frozen 'Plant Protein' sections in most supermarkets and now they are moving to the refrigerated case. While these products are getting closer to meat, can they replace meat for flavor, nutrition, versatility and texture? The answer is yes and this is what we are doing every day at Improved Nature.

FT-NIR...Increasing Efficiency and Productivity in Your Lab Shannon Richard, Bruker Optics

Many components that are typically measured by wet chemistry analytical techniques in the Food and Ingredient Industries can be readily transferred to FTNIR. Discussion will include this wide range of applications as well as what to consider when creating FTNIR methods.

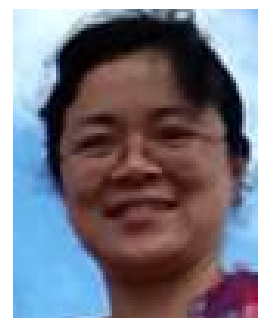

Third Level, Room D

Food bioactive compounds: antioxidants in vegetables and polyunsaturated fatty acids in fish oil Ting Sun, Framingham State University

Asparagus has the highest antioxidant activity among commonly consumed vegetables and Salmon byproducts contain high levels of essential fatty acids such as EPA and DHA. The limited shelf life of asparagus and oils from byproducts of Atlantic farmed salmon makes them good symbiotic candidates for preserving bioactive compounds. The talk focuses on the optimal extraction of antioxidants in asparagus and their utility in preserving polyunsaturated fatty acids derived from fish oil.
